Hunting for the Perfect Gift

The Columbus Circle Holiday Market is a street fair with crafts and art through Dec. 24, and has the added advantage of being across the street from the Museum of Arts and Design (and its shop). (www.nycgoparks.org; www.madmuseum.org)

Grand Central Holiday Fair gathers juried craft artists working in a range of mediums through Dec. 24 inside a building that is a gift in itself. (<http://grandcentralterminal.com>)

Holiday Shops at Bryant Park takes place between 40th and 42nd streets, and Fifth and Sixth avenues through Jan. 3. (www.bryantpark.org)

Union Square Holiday Market is in the same vein as the market at Columbus Circle—great for food and a festive atmosphere in one of the city's hubs through Dec. 24. (www.unionsquarenyc.org)

The One of a Kind Show and Sale is a newcomer to the New York holiday scene. At Pier 94, the sale has a long roster of participating artists and vendors Dec. 11-13. (www.oneofakindshowny.com)

Shoppers looking for a more intimate holiday experience may visit the Grand Central Holiday Fair, below left, the store at the Museum of Arts and Design, below, or the first annual One of a Kind Show and Sale, which will showcase work like this "Squares & Triangles" necklace by Susan Keane of Sosan Jewelry Designs and these cashmere scarves by Elyse Allen Textiles.
